James Figg
English Boxing Champion
b.1684 d.1734

James Figg was born in Thame and became the most famous prize-fighter of his day. He was the first undisputed champion boxer of England and won 270 bouts. His school teaching the Noble Science of Self-Defence, just off Oxford Street in London, was frequented by the nobility and he is credited with inventing the boxing "ring" and the use of a referee. Boxing gloves, though, were a later invention.

The pub celebrates not only James Figg, but British sporting achievement down the years.
